Mira:

I mean, I guess the question is, again, I've talked about a bunch of different times that this may have happened throughout our relationship. I'm wondering what about that time sticks in your mind, that caused you to feel ... What caused you to believe in moments of sobriety that you had raped me? What was different about that time ... as opposed to any other time? (silence) Hold on. Person. (silence) Because this sticks out in my head, too. Oh my God. (silence).

Justin:

I feel like I really forced you that time. At that time, I was ... After that time, I actually, really ... considered what your implied consent was, and not ... not before that. Certainly didn't ... take that as seriously as I did afterwards.

Mira:

I mean, I was crying. You remember me crying?

Justin:

At the time, I believed it was all for show, and I thought that I was taking care of you.

Mira:

You remember me crying through all three times, though?

Justin:

Yeah.

Mira:

And you did it anyway, even though I told you I didn't want to.

Justin:

Which is why I'm saying it was very different.
